1190s: St. Audoen's Church. Dublin was originally built around the areas of Christchurch and Cornmarket, on the banks of the River Liffey. Located just a stone's throw from what was once the medieval city-centre, you'll find St. Audoen's, the city's oldest church and a fine example of 12th century Anglo-Norman architecture. It was subsequently expanded; King Henry VI oversaw the ...
