Charles Fletcher Lummis was a unique character in America's history of the not-so-old West. A writer, publisher, outdoorsman, and certified madman. He walked from Ohio to LA for a job with the LA Times back when he was almost the entire editorial department. He was the LA City Librarian for awhile until his antics got him fired.

Written by Zane Grey Review by Marcia K. Matthews. When I was young, my father owned the Zane Grey collection, and I read many volumes. I found some of them bland and sanitized. It's exciting to discover that the author was heavily censored, and for the first time to read an uncensored Cabin Gulch. Driven by character and action, the story of ...
