In Love Alfred Hayes

In Love. by. Alfred Hayes. 3.95 · Rating details · 1,388 ratings · 185 reviews. A powerful novel, telling of a middle-aged man who falls in love with a young divorcee who lives alone in a tiny, untidy apartment in the New York of the 1940s. Here, he visits her, erratically, and not always happily.

In Love by Alfred Hayes - Goodreads

In Love was Hayes's fourth novel, and as the story unfolds, there is a dreadful sense that the middle-aged protagonist is heading for disaster by falling in love with a younger girl who 'inhabits a world from which he is excluded.' When a rival appears, in the shape of a millionaire with an indecent proposal, the cynicism and misery of the situation become almost unbearable."

What makes In Love such an impressive work is the writing, as Hayes finds the right almost-wistful tone for his narrator, a man bowed to the inevitability of what happened, his account tinged with that slight regret of not being able to be a different man, of not being able to be the man who could have been satisfied with her, and who could have offered her what she needed.
