Release date: 07/09/2018. To clarify the role of members in both single and multi academy trusts, and to encourage trusts to improve their governance practice, the National Governance Association (NGA) has produced new guidance that describes members as “the guardians of the governance of the trust”. In the new guidance, members are described as having a “limited and distinct role” which should avoid duplicating the role of the trust board or assuming the role of trustees.

Guidance clarifying the role of members in academy trusts ...

Introduction The members of an academy trust are the guardians of the governance of the trust. They have a limited and distinct role, but one which is often misunderstood. It is probably fair to say that many trusts struggle to define the role, let alone to utilise it in an effective way.
